SUBSTITUTION.

The imitator is like the counterfeiter. He enters the field of businass with a cheaper, lower grade article of merchandise, made as a substitute for the genulina, and generally sold at a cheaper price, arguing, as usual, that it is "just as zood." The dealer is persuaded to handle it on glowing promises of enormous profits—much larger than the regular legitimate profit which is made on the genuline article. The imitator succeeds in playing upon man's natural avarice, places his goods on sale with the dealer, and instructs him to take advantage of the public by substituting the false article for the genuine at every opportunity. Tou can be pretty sure that whenever you ask for a well-known product and the dealer tells you he has something else that's just as good, or even better, the dealer is going to make a greater profit on that article than the one you call for, and in nine cases out of ten you will get a much inferior article.

Bome buyers are easily imposed upon and this encourages the get-rich-quick' schemers to increase their substitutions. This also discourages the legitimate manufacturer who is putting out articles of merchandise that represent honest value to the consumer. Where a man has devoted years of his life in perfecting an article that he knows cannot be excelled in quality; where he has spent thousands of dollars in advertising his goods; and where these goods have been giving universal satisfaction for a long time for the cannot be cannot be

Cost $498 to Fight Forest Fires

It is reported that the cost for fighting forest fires in Killingly during the present month amounts to $498, as far as known. The men who fought the fires were allowed 20 cents an hour. Of this sum one-half is to be paid by the state, a quarter each by town and county. The cost for fighting fires, however, is only a fraction of the loss caused by the fires and the expenditure represents only a small amount of the value of proparty saved from destruction by the willing efforts of the men who went into the woods and worked so long and hard.

It was one of the best ball games that fans in these parts have had a chance to get enthusiastic over in many a day, a contest that went twelve innings and a contest that went twelve innings and was finally won by Attawaugan, 6 to 4, when Bianchette came through with a healthy wallop to deep right center and scored two runners that had managed to get on the base lines just before he came to bat. This was in the first half of the last inning. During their final turn at bat Putnam's players had a chance to make a killing, even after two were out, but the necessary hit did not materialize. With two down, Kent, who was pitching, and up to that time pitching well, for Attawaugah, began to weaken and passed two men. Blanchette relieved and up to that time pitching well, for Attawaugah, began to weaken and passed two men. Blanchette relieved him to find himself facing Connolly, who led the national league in bafting a part of the time during the past season. Connolly slammed the first one somewhere over the house tops and to the east of School street, but it was outside the foul line and the big clout went for nothing. Thereafter Blanchette saw to it that Connolly did not get one he could reach and he finally when to first on balls, filling the bases.
